for Taylor's house. About one and a half miles from the house they saw Steagall coming in a gallop. As he approached the constable saw that he had a pistol in his saddle-pockets. When they came together the constable grabbed the pistol and called on him to surrender. In the twinkling of an eye he drew a pistol from the other side and presented it at the constable's breast, telling him he would not be arrested. In this dangerous position they role about 200 yards, when they came to a house where Sam Coombs lived. Coombs came out to the road and was called on by the constable to assist in the arrest, the constable managing to give him a pis-tol. Just then Steagall turned and snapped his pistol at Coombs. The constable and Coombs began shooting about that time, Steagall returning the fire. He shot three times—they five or six.

Steagall was shot through the thigh, and the leg bone was broken and shattered. He fell from his horse and the shooting was stopped. He was placed in Mr. Coembs' wagon and taken to the residence of Mr. Moore, a mile or so distant. There Dr. Curtis dressed his wound, and he was placed under guard. His wound is regarded as quite serious, and may result fatally. It is not probable any action will be taken against the constable or Mr. Coombs, as it

Interview with Hon. H. H. Campbell.

Correspondence of the Gazette. MATADOR, MOTLEY COUNTY, TEX., July 25.—A GAZETTE reporter having met the Hon. H. H. Campbell, county judge of Motley county, asked the judge to give him a statement with reference to the report going the rounds to the effect that he had shipped cattle infected with Texas fever from Southern Texas North agrees the cov. from Southern Texas North across the gov-ernment quarantine line established by Secretary Rusk. The judge said that the report that he had done such a thing was not true, but that he had promised to take a bunch of cattle and place them in a pas-ture which he had leased, and which pasture is entirely separate from any other pasture, and it is true that said cattle had seen brought from Southern Texas, but bey were clear of Texas fever or fever of my kind. "I hear," said the judge, "that it is also reported that I had these cattle brought in here to injure the Maindor est. brought in here to injure the Matador cattle company. I am surprised that any of my friends should believe for a moment that I would attempt to tear down an institution of the magnitude of the Matador cattle company, and one which I myself was instrumental in building up. I look upon the Matador cow ranch as an outgrowth of the Matador cow ranch as an outgrowth of my own labors, and hence have a feeling of pride with reference to that institution. It may desire to see the Matador company nourish, but I do not desire to see it grow and expand at the expense of my county. I desire to see the ranch and Motley county grow and expand together, and be of mutual benefit each to the other. This cow ranch was founded by me twelve years ago upon a basis that was broad enough to meet all changes that might take place in the development of the country. I was drifting it from an ordinary Texas cow ranch into a stock-farming ranch, with a perfect system
